How Italian Wines are Rated by Italians

While many people are aware of how French and Californian wines are rated and controlled, both of these areas took their cue from Italy. From the time of the Roman Empire, Italian winemakers were governed by laws that defined and controlled the regions where the grapes were grown and the individual names by which the wines were known. Just as Bordeaux, for example, defines not only a kind of grape but also the type of wine from that area of France, Italian wine names or appellations and labels are strictly controlled.

Although the concept of region and wine classification originated in Italy, it wasn't until the latter half of the twentieth century that Italian wines came under a nationwide control system known as DOC (Denominazione di Origine Controllata).

A small number of wines carry the further marking of DOCG; the "G" meaning Garantita showing that the wine is authentic and of exceptional quality, worldwide reputation, and historical relevance.

How to read the Gambero Rosso

ABOVE AVERAGE TO GOOD
EQUIVALENT TO 70-79/100

VERY GOOD TO EXCELLENT
EQUIVALENT TO 80-89/100

OUTSTANDING WINE
EQUIVALENT TO 90-99/100

Whereas many people throughout the world are familiar with the Wine Spectator ratings, many have overlooked the highly noted ratings of Italian Wines. Gambero Rosso Editore ( G.R.E. ) and Slow Food Agricola have rated thousands of Italian wines. The G.R.E. "makes a significant difference to the behavior of the market for premium Italian wines...it is a mainstay, a pièce de résistance, essential to the image and credibility of two organizations that are eminently successful and, indeed, even fashionable...a pair of enterprises that have succeeded in shaking the drowsy world of the food and wine media to its foundations." [G.R.E. int 2000]

Bordeaux Wine Region Map

The Official 1855 Classification of The Wines of Bordeaux came about after Napoleon III decision to have an Exposition in Paris. He asked for the wines of all France to be exhibited. The Members of the Bordeaux Chamber of Commerce decided to present all Cru Classes up to fifth growths. The List that they came up with included 4 first growths, 12 seconds, 14 thirds, 11 fourths, and 17 fifths. Reaction to the controversy of “Rankings” was heated but this format for a look at French wines of Bordeaux has lasted for more than 150 years. Only one winery has been added to the list of First Growth Chateaus. This was Chateau Mouton-Rothschild in 1973. There are now 61 chateaus on the list. There have been many changes in ownership and divisions of the original estates. Those that can trace its lineage to the classification can retain their claim to cru classé status.
